

California Transportation System of the Future

From the covered wagon, to trains, to Henry Ford's Model T, to the Wright brothers' first airplane, to the first spaceship, the 20th Century changed forever the meaning of mobility. Today, at the dawn of a new century, we move in aircraft, cars, high-speed trains, buses, cruise ships, we walk, and we bicycle. We ship equipment, food, and materials anywhere in the world. We travel to distant lands in supersonic planes. We orbit the earth in space shuttles and launch satellites for communications and military defense. We order computers, clothes, videos, CDs, on the Internet and have them delivered to our doorstep the following day. We marvel at our technological achievements and envision what the 21st Century will bring - faster, more efficient, environmentally conscious, and safe ways to travel the earth and someday reach other planets. In the next twenty-five years transportation will evolve to another level. How will the transportation system change in the next century?

The California Department of Transportation is sponsoring an art contest to select the cover of the California Transportation Plan. The contest's theme is "California's Transportation System of the Future." Artwork will be judged for its creative expression of California's future transportation system in the year 2025. The contest will encourage our youth to use their imagination and ingenuity in creating the vision of our future transportation system.

- What technological advances do you envision?
- How will you get to work?
- How will your children get to school?
- How will you travel in the air, water, and space?
- Will you be able to vacation on the moon or travel to a satellite station orbiting the earth?
- What new frontiers will mankind reach in this century?
- What new discoveries are waiting to happen?

Remember that the sky is the limit!
